

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for cooling a portable computer system using a computer cooler with a cold plate that comes into contact with the portable computer system to transfer heat from the portable computer system to the environment surrounding the computer cooler.